Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 04 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold and showery, winds easing.

Today:
Many parts cloudy with showers or longer spells of rain, some heavy, especially in the north. Some sunny spells, mainly in southern England and northern Scotland. Strong winds slowly moderating, though remaining blustery and feeling cold.

Tonight:
A band of showery rain across central UK slowly moving southwards. Clear spells following from the north, allowing a frost in places, whilst wintry shower affect northern Scotland.

Wednesday:
Sunny spells and showers, some heavy with hail and thunder, especially in the north and east. Snow on hills, also to low levels in the far north at first. Cold.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Sunny spells and showers through Thursday and Friday with overnight frost in places. Rain and strong winds spreading north and east through Saturday as it becomes warmer in the southeast.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.